

To whom this may concern,

I attend the meeting last night and intended on providing some feedback concerning the energy rebate programs you have in place. Truth be told I chickened out at the last minute and chose this forum to give my opinion.

I'm a mechanical contractor that has worked with Action Energy on a few projects in the past. I feel the program has many benefits and was able to witness them first hand. The first being the most obvious which is the energy savings which can be substantial on the large multi dwelling buildings. These buildings often have outdated low efficiency equipment that wouldn't be updated due to the lack of funding. Secondly the reduced demand on the energy infrastructure. The third which I think is overlooked is the improvement on the tenants quality of living and thirdly providing work and creating jobs for people like myself. These improvements would probably not be completed if left solely up to the building owners. I have found Action Energy to be very reputable and professional to work with.
