

EEAC Executive Committee Candidate: Seat Representing the Environmental Community

Amy Boyd, Acadia Center

EEAC Seat Representing the Environmental Community

In seeking re-appointment to the environmental community seat on the EEAC executive committee, I hope to help the EEAC play its crucial role in meeting the urgency of the climate crisis and making the next decade count by significantly reducing greenhouse gas emissions. I believe together we can, and should, recommit ourselves to creating cleaner, healthier, and better buildings for everyone. Acadia Center has long been a pillar of the EEAC and the executive committee – helping to create both, and serving in this seat from the beginning. The perspective gained from that decade-plus of service – including my own 6 years in the seat – brings significant assets. In my tenure on the executive committee, I believe I have been an advocate not only for the climate, but also for consumers, including those who have been underserved by the programs, and overburdened by energy bills and pollution. I look forward to continuing that work in another term.
